

space productivity

People rarely perform well in an uncomfortable environment. The right use of space can make as much impact on your business as the right choice of people. Let us analyse your needs, evaluate your premises and show you how to get people and space working in perfect harmony.

How productive is your office space?

This is a question that we often ask as it demonstrates how you view your office environment and its effect on your organisation's productivity.

By listening to you and discussing how your office performs we can make simple suggestions that make a positive contribution to your productivity. These may be as simple as looking at desk layouts or storage requirements.

Needless to say, when we design an office interior from scratch we automatically design in productivity-enhancing solutions.

We work closely with you to assess how effective your existing premises are. Perhaps you are considering relocation, maybe you've run out of space. We can do an initial Occupancy Survey that looks at your current site against key criteria to establish if you do need to move or may in fact be able to remain where you are by making more of your current space or introducing new ways of working or taking advantage of off-site archival storage.
